HONGKONG, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 27, 1895.

THE NEW SANITARY BYE-LAWS.

The last number of the Government Gazette contains an unusual amount of interesting matter, which we intend to consider in detail from time to time. We have, it is true, already given our columns the substance and many particulars of the reports published in the Gazette, but they have now presented in complete form, making it fuller and more intelligible. (For the present the subject to which we wish specially to call our readers' attention is the complete suite of new Sanitary Bye-Laws, made under section 17 of Ordinance 15 of 1894. These bye-laws contain thirty-one clauses and are intended to provide an efficient means of protecting the city from the spread of fatal diseases. These bye-laws, as our readers will remember, have been worked out with great care by the Sanitary Board, as our reports during the past eight months of its many meetings, in discussion of the clauses, has already shown. Doubtless these provisions are not absolutely perfect, but they are probably as nearly so as the complex questions involved will permit; and, with some slight modifications, that time and experience may suggest and approve, they will be found to be a well-developed, equitable and practical system of sanitary laws, such as has been rare in the history of any city. We think any one examining these provisions with care will admit that the Sanitary Board and the Legislative Council are entitled to great credit for the patient, persistent, careful work they have devoted to this gigantic task. No doubt the first operation of these provisions among certain classes will cause considerable friction, for even great reforms when entailing a serious disturbance of a fixed condition of things are temporarily more or less of a hardship. In this instance, the difficulties are still more accentuated and diversified by the peculiar complications that we have to deal with in our colony. Nearly the entire population is unfamiliar with the English language. They neither read our papers nor our books; attend no public meetings, come in no way in contact with our English-speaking citizens. Whichever they have shown sufficient confidence in the integrity and good faith of the British Government to settle in large numbers in Victoria and have here located great wealth in fixed investments, yet they never feel perfectly sure of their future rights, and naturally always view with some distrust changes which entail expense, inconvenience, and possibly some loss of profit. They do not value so greatly as European nations a high degree of care for human life and property, among the lower classes, and they do not sympathize with too much zeal shown for the welfare of the cooler. Accustomed themselves to good living, and trained in the methods of avoiding contagion from their surrounding strife, they prefer to take their chances of contracting disease rather than to spend money in bettering the condition of the poor, even if thereby minimizing the possibilities of infection. This subject might be profitably discussed at length, but we have, we think, said sufficient to give an idea why the changes made necessary by the new sanitary laws will naturally meet with considerable opposition, especially from the more avaricious landlords and from the many unprincipled coille lodging-house keepers, and from others of a similar character who have been earning undue profits in disregard of all laws of cleanliness and in utter disregard of the general health and welfare of the community. It is no wonder that such classes of individuals view with alarm the new Sanitary Bye-laws and try to fight the coilles into believing that the registration of the lodging-houses and the provisions of the new bye-laws are simply means for imposing special taxes on the poor coilles. The falsehoods that these unscrupulous lodging-house keepers and others are circulating are chiefly responsible for the present strife, and for the difficulties thus far placed in the way of the enforcement of the new Bye-laws.

The Bye-laws, although very plainly expressed, are naturally of a somewhat technical nature requiring careful reading and study to comprehend their full meaning. It is not our purpose here to enter upon a discussion of the separate clauses. They provide, in a general way, for proper ventilation in basements, or wherever kitchen, latrine, slop or any other objectionable matter is to be handled, and they also provide for proper drains and ventilation and sufficient cubic space for sleeping rooms in proportion to the number of people using the same by night; they also provide for the disposal of refuse matter and for the maintenance of a generally decent condition of buildings and their surroundings, and for reasonable and permanent sanitary state of the entire city. The Board has, however, wisely made the specifications and penalties under which these regulations are to be carried out reasonably elastic and has reserved to itself a certain right in many provisions to vary the exact letter of the law, as long as a substantial agreement with its spirit is shown; and it must be evident to any fair-minded man that a Board composed of men of the eminence and character and disinterestedness of our Sanitary Board will always give the largest justice possible under the special circumstances of each exceptional case. We warmly commend these excellent bye-laws to the hearty co-operation of all citizens and residents who have the welfare of the colony at heart; and we feel sure that, if the efforts of the Sanitary Board receive proper support and if it appears they are at present—Hongkong will soon be in a commendable sanitary condition, and will never have again to chronicle such a disastrous epoch as that of the "plague year" of 1894.
